FESTIVE INFORMATION

Christmas Eve (24th December)
Christmas Eve is not a public holiday in the UK, but many people will not work a full day because they need to travel to their families. Public transport services may finish earlier than usual.

Christmas Day (25th December)
This is a public holiday in the UK. Most shops, restaurants and places of entertainment are closed.

Boxing Day (26th December)
This is also a public holiday. Many shops start their post-Christmas sales on this day (people sometimes queue up outside department stores early in the hope of getting a good bargain). Most transport services will be running, but they often have a reduced service and may start later in the day than normal. There will be some sporting events taking place, such as football and horse racing.

What do people do on Christmas Day?
Lots of families celebrate Christmas with their own customs and traditions and many Christians start the day by going to church. Typically people exchange gifts, enjoy a festive drink, open crackers (filled with small toys, a paper hat, and a written joke), and eat a big Christmas dinner with some or all of the following: roasted turkey (or goose), roast potatoes, root vegetables such as carrots and parsnips, Brussels sprouts (love them or hate them!), bread sauce, and 'pigs in blankets' (sausages wrapped in bacon). After this a short sleep on the sofa is often required to help digest all the food, and the evening is spent playing a board game or watching Christmas shows on the television. Many families also watch the Queen deliver her annual Christmas Day speech.
FESTIVE FOODS TO TRY

Mince pies
Small sweet pies filled with fruit such as currants and raisins, fruit peel and spices. The filling is called mincemeat (not to be confused with minced meat...).
Great with: sherry. Just ask Father Christmas (Santa Claus). Traditionally, on Christmas Eve families leave mince pies and a glass of sherry for Father Christmas who visits people's homes overnight to deliver gifts and presents.

Christmas cake
A rich fruit cake coated with marzipan and icing.
Great with: believe it or not, cheese. In Yorkshire, fruit cake is often eaten with cheese.

Christmas pudding
A rich fruit pudding cooked by boiling.
Great with: fire and brandy butter. Traditionally, Christmas puddings are splashed with alcohol such as brandy, set on fire, and served with brandy butter or cream.

Stilton cheese
A strong cheese with blue veins - only made in Derbyshire, Leicestershire and Nottinghamshire but available everywhere.
Great with: port. Stilton is often enjoyed with a glass of port at Christmas.

Trifle
A cold dessert made with layers of sponge cake, custard, jelly and cream.
Great with: a soft drink. The sponge cake is often soaked in lots of sherry making it quite alcoholic!
