SECTION 2: WHY STUDY THIS PROGRAMME?

This programme offers non-business/hotel/hospitality/tourism students the opportunity to move from their existing undergraduate specialism into the international hospitality, events and tourism industries. For this reason the MSc in International Hospitality, Events & Tourism Management is referred to as our 'conversion' programme in the suite of Masters Programmes offered by the Oxford School of Hospitality Management (OSHM).

This programme develops students by adopting an integrated operational approach where the hospitality, events and tourism industry acts as the basis for investigating international business and management. The OSHM postgraduate programmes have been developed using the concept of "lifelong learning" and this MSc should be seen as another step in this process. The programmes are academically rigorous and place responsibility on individual students to continue to study outside formal classroom based sessions; they encourage students to develop the skills needed to study independently by helping identify and set learning goals; and then to implement them; and then to reflect upon what each individual has achieved so they can become reflective practitioners.

In line with other postgraduate programmes at Oxford Brookes University the MSc in International Hospitality, Events & Tourism Management reflects the postgraduate graduate attributes vital for employability. As a conversion programme the academic literacies are particularly critical as they ensure that students will have the knowledge and understanding to be able to function effectively in international hospitality, events and tourism operations. This programme also develops students' research literacy, critical self-awareness and personal literacy, and active citizenship which are important for postgraduate level study and careers within the international hospitality, events and tourism sectors.

Profiles of staff teaching on the programme can be found at

4.3 PROFESSIONAL REQUIREMENTS

This programme does not have a professional accreditation.

SECTION 5: TEACHING AND ASSESSMENT

The learning, teaching and assessment strategy is designed to provide students with a wide range of different approaches. This combines a variety of experiences in terms of teaching style, coursework assignments and the student learning experience. Each module, and each module leader, has their own particular methods of learning, teaching and assessment. These different approaches are important to provide students with a stimulating learning environment. The programme maintains strong quality control mechanisms based on student and external examiner feedback to ensure that each module delivers high quality.

The teaching, learning and assessment strategies of the programme are interrelated. The aim of the programme team is to provide a learning environment where students will readily participate in the learning process. Students will be actively involved with, and contribute to, their own learning through structured activities and discussions led by tutors and fellow students. Emphasis will be placed upon an applied approach to resolving environmental, managerial and individual issues informed by theoretical models and acquired practice, utilising the accumulated knowledge within the programme community. A detailed profile of knowledge, understanding and skills that will be developed is given in each Module Guide issued by the Module Leaders during the programme.

Teaching methods will be student centred within a lecture/seminar or workshop approach to programme delivery. Classes could involve tutor input, analysis of case studies, problem-solving activities, computer-based business simulations, presentation of papers, analysis of data for decision making and directed reading and research. Students will be encouraged to contribute through both individual and group activities during classes with tutors but also in similar activities outside of normal class contact time that are student led. For example, outside of classes students will be expected to organise themselves to undertake group or individual research activities, directed reading, prepare presentations and reports, analyse case studies and where appropriate prepare themselves for examinations.

The programme has an emphasis on the development and application of research skills, reflecting the view that a successful career is likely to depend increasingly on students' capacity for conducting well-grounded empirical and literature-based research and analysis. Tutors have a wide range of research experience and interests and this body of research and expertise will be available to students to facilitate and guide their own research projects and assignments. These research interests also feed into the teaching process and provide a core of research on which students may draw in the course of their learning.

Although this may be termed a 'taught' Masters programme, some of the most important skills acquired are those of independent learning. Students experience a wide variety of learning and teaching methods at the University, which is student-centred, participative and interactive, however they are expected to take a great deal of responsibility for their own learning.

A key element of the philosophy underpinning these Masters programmes is encouraging engagement in students Personal Development Planning to help improve students' personal effectiveness. During the induction programme, students will be introduced to the concept of personal planning and reflection; and encouraged to set personal learning goals for the entire programme. Throughout the year, students will have opportunities to observe and participate in activities and discussions; they will need to develop an awareness of how individual and collective actions and behaviours impact on themselves and others. Becoming a reflective learner underpins our postgraduate ethos. To achieve this, students need to engage in critical self-reflection and to give and receive feedback from each other and from tutors.

SECTION 6: ADMISSION TO THE PROGRAMME

6.1 ENTRY REQUIREMENTS

A minimum of a second class honours degree (2:2) in any academic discipline, or equivalent overseas degree from a recognised institution.

This course attracts students from a wide range of backgrounds and nationalities. Applicants who possess a diploma rather than a good degree may be eligible for entry provided they have compensatory work experience and can demonstrate career development.

Please note that although useful, prior work experience in the hospitality and tourism industry is not a requirement for this course.

Entry will also be subject to two satisfactory references (one of these must be an academic reference).

Please also see the university's general entry requirements.

English language requirements

If English is not your first language you will need to satisfy the university's English language requirements:

- IELTS minimum level 6.0 (with a minimum of 6.0 in reading and writing, and 5.5 in listening and speaking) or equivalent
- If you have completed your undergraduate degree in the UK (at least one full year of study) you will automatically meet our English language requirements

Please also see the university's Standard English language requirements

6.2 DBS AND OTHER PRE-COURSE CHECKS REQUIRED

Not applicable

SECTION 7: PREPARATION FOR EMPLOYMENT

The Oxford School of Hospitality Management (OSHM) works with a range of external partners in the form of independent consultants, company executives, and practicing managers across all functions and areas within the international hospitality and tourism industry. Such employer engagement includes guest lectures, panel discussions, awarding prizes for achievement, mentoring, live projects/case studies and careers presentations. The OSHM also hosts networking events where students benefit from the chance to communicate with key members of the hospitality industry, gain advice and build their contacts. There are also a series of guest lectures by visiting Fellows and Professors are organized throughout the year to provide students with current and topical hospitality and tourism perspectives. There is a regular programme of weekly careers presentations, and currently more than twenty companies come to recruit OSHM graduates and postgraduates. These companies are prestigious UK and international hospitality firms which include Fairmont Hotels and Resorts, the IHG Group, Richmond Creative Events and Lexington Catering.

Many students gain highly relevant experience during their optional paid supervised work experience. They are supported in securing a placement by a dedicated team of staff to ensure that their placement matches their aspirations and abilities, and through preparation in their first year of study. Employer partners for work experience include major international groups such as Four Seasons, Marriott International, Rezidor, and Fairmont Hotels & Resorts, and UK-based companies including Malmaison and Hotel du Vin, and in prestigious owner-managed properties such as The Breakers in Palm Beach Florida and Claridges.

The Bacchus Alumni Society is a worldwide network of hospitality graduates from Brookes and friends or associates of the OSHM. It is with the support of this association that the Bacchus mentoring programme, linking final year students with senior figures in industry, has become such a success. Relationships and networks developed through this scheme are seen to be rewarding and of immense value to both students and industry mentors. That so many alumni want to stay connected is testament to the quality of the educational experiences offered and the regard in which OSHM is held within the industry.
